JUNIOR PROM. IS BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT

Perfect Setting Lends Attraction to Dance

BALL ROOM FILLED

Efforts of Committee Result in Perfectly Run Function

"Perfect" will be the word used by all those who attended the Junior Prom. last night, when expressing their opinion of the entertainment. From the moment the McGill Orchestra started, the dancers going until the last bars of "God Save the King" concluded the evening, sheer, unalloyed enjoyment reigned supreme in the Halls of the Union. The decorations were splendid, the Orchestra displayed their usual talent, the refreshments were all that could be asked, and finally (by far the most important in the minds of the mere males) the girls were their usual lovely charming selves.

The Ball room presented a most colorful scene, the decorations of blue and gold; streamers on the walls, and lights covered with paper of the same colors, blended beautifully with the brilliant colors of the girls' gowns, the whole forming a striking picture.

The dining room and Cafeteria, where a delectable supper was served at half-past eleven, were decorated in Red and White, while the stairways were draped with British and foreign national emblems.

The ball room was well filled, but at no time overcrowded, there being at all times ample room.

The Patrons and Patronesses were Sir Arthur and Lady Currie, Miss Hurlbutt, and the Deans of the Faculties and their wives; Mr. Cyril Playfair, of Queen's, and Mr. Smith, of Macdonald, were the guests of the Junior class.

The Committee, to whom the success of the dance was in great part due, were the following—Misses Brown and Basken, and Messrs. B. N. Wilson, Alec Moore, O. Leslie, R. B. Wilson, F. Chauvin, J. Loughrey, C. Webster, C. Cope, C. Ross, W. Pratt, E. Day and H. Bushel.

Among those present were—Misses E. Winsor, A. Loynachan, F. James, H. Strachan, A. McPherson, C. Jarwood, A. Carter, M. Crawford, M. Barclay, M. McLaren, M. Annable, L. Evans, M. C. Brown, D. C.I.H.U. MEETING IN TORONTO TODAY

Université de Montréal to Apply for Admission

The annual meeting of the Canadian Intercollegiate Hockey Union takes place to-day in Toronto, the McGill and Queen's representatives journeying there last night. The business of the meeting will be to draw up the schedule for the 1923 season, and also to consider the application of the Université de Montréal to the Union. The French University became a member of the Intercollegiate Athletic Union at the last meeting of that body held recently in Kingston, and is now making a strong bid for admission to the Hockey League.

Last year it will be remembered that the Montreal University's application was turned down, the heavy schedule of the University of Toronto team being a great factor in their casting a vote against their admission. This year it is unknown what the attitude of the members of the league will be, except that McGill is certain to support the French University.

From the point of view of McGill it would add greatly to the interest if the Université de Montréal were admitted. The exhibition games played last year between the McGill and Montreal sextettes proved excellent drawing cards, and it would undoubtedly serve to give amateur hockey in Montreal a boost if there were two teams from this city playing in the Intercollegiate series. However, all this will be decided at to-day's meeting in Toronto.

What do you charge for your rooms? Five dollars up. But I'm a student. Then it's five dollars down. —Exchange.

DR. MOTT TO SPEAK TO CANADIAN CLUB

Speaker Is Noted as Leader of Men

The Canadian Club of McGill has announced, as the next in the notable list of speakers who will come under their auspices this year, Dr. John R. Mott, who will speak at R.V.C. on Thursday, Nov. 28th, at 5 p.m. To many at McGill the name of Dr. Mott is very familiar. His last visit to the University was in 1916, when the auditorium of the Montreal High School was engaged for the University meetings.

Dr. Mott has a world-wide reputation as a leader of men. He combines with prophetic insight an unusual faculty for organization and direction. He has been the soul of several great world movements, and is probably better known in every country of the world to-day than any other man in a non-political position.

He has for many years been the Executive head of the International Y.M.C.A. Movement. He was the moving spirit in the formation of the World's Student Christian Federation, of which he has been General Secretary since its inception in 1895. He has also been Chairman of the International Student Volunteer Movement since 1888. During his career he has been General Secretary of the National War Work Committee of the United States, and extended work in prisoner of war camps throughout Europe. His services were recognized by the decoration of the Legion of Honor (France) and the D.S.M. (U.S.). In his connection with these movements he has on several occasions toured the world, and studied conditions in many countries. His knowledge of peoples, and of conditions governing their existence, was recognized in his appointment to a special Mexican Commission by President Wilson in 1916, and later to the diplomatic mission to Russia in 1917.

Dr. Mott has not been lacking in academic honors, as he holds degrees from Cornell, Yale, Edinburgh, and Princeton. He is also an author with many books and pamphlets to his credit.

But above all these things that which commends him most to the people of many countries to-day is his undying faith in the possibility of a better world, which he has been also constantly to visualize while open-mindedly facing the stern realities and planning to meet the problems of the present order. He has been one of the great constructive forces in international life during the past five years, and as such should have a message of interest to McGill students.

R.V.C. PLANS COMPLETE FOR THE THE DANSANT

This afternoon, at 4 o'clock, McGill students will have the opportunity of working off some surplus energy when the McGill Dance Orchestra holds forth at the Royal Victoria College. The final preparations have been completed, and with a large advance sale of tickets everything points to success.

Freshmen and freshettes will have a splendid opportunity for closer acquaintance, and R.V.C. authorities give assurances that all men coming "stag" will be carefully looked after by flocks of young ladies held in reserve. Refreshments will be served at the end of the afternoon.

Flipper—I'm in heaven when I dance with you.
Flapper—My, but I'm warm.

CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT TORONTO

S.C.M. Expects Five Hundred Students

OPENS DEC. 28th

Governor-General to Speak at Opening Session

Five hundred or more students from the colleges and Universities of Canada will gather in convention at Convocation Hall, Toronto, during the Christmas holidays. This will be the largest and the most representative gathering of Canadian students ever held. Three years ago over four hundred Canadians attended the great student Conference at Des Moines, Iowa. On that occasion they went early and met for a day together. Although on American soil, this was really the first National gathering of Canadian students representing practically all the colleges of Protestant persuasion in Canada. From the discussion of that day came positive proposals that later eventuated in the inauguration of the Student Christian Movement of Canada at a small gathering of delegates in Guelph the following New Year.

And now, with two years of activity behind it, and with its machinery of organization rapidly taking shape the Movement issues a call to the students of Canada to meet for consideration of one of the most pressing problems of the time. A glance at the proposed programme of the Convention reveals the scope and ambition of the task that is set before them. The rural, the industrial, the racial question of Canada, our international outlook, the relation of students, and of Christianity to these, are the subjects upon which the Conference is to concentrate. The Governor-General, Lord Byng, will be the speaker at the opening session on Dec. 28th. The general plan of the Conference is to have an address every morning from Dr. Herbert Gray, of Glasgow, who has been invited to give some time to the Canadian colleges. Following this, the subjects mentioned above will in turn be opened up by prominent Canadians and others. The evening sessions will be given entirely to open forum work on the problems presented.

The idea behind this Conference is to meet the important issues of our country entirely in the open, to face facts frankly, however disagreeable they may be, to eliminate prejudices and preconceptions, and to consider fairly as many points of view as may be presented. With this end in view students of Roman

WEEK ADMISSION TO HOCKEY LEAGUE

Four New Clubs Want to Play in Junior City Series

It looks as if there would be plenty of competition in the Junior City Hockey League this winter. At a meeting of the league held last night, no fewer than four new clubs sought entrance. They were: St. Lambert, St. Augustine's, Université de Montréal and St. Michael's. Judging by the earnestness and aggressiveness of their representatives, these clubs intend to "make it hot" for the other members of the league, if they are admitted.

It was pointed out to them that, no one in the league had any objection to their joining—in fact, one of the things most to be desired was increased membership. But the League is hampered by lack of ice. The only arrangements that it has been possible to make so far are for three hours a week at the Arena, and it is feared that if no more ice can be obtained, the clubs will have to be refused admittance. The only alternative that presents itself is that a separate action should be formed for these clubs, who could play on their own outdoor rinks.

A subject of importance to McGill students is that of birth certificates. It was pointed out that the regulations of the Association required that every man, before the first game, should show his birth certificate. Several McGill players were deficient last year in this respect. Those intending to play this year should attend to this right away.

Officers for the year were elected, as follows:—

President—Mr. Riddell.
Vice-President—Mr. Huff.
2nd Vice-President—Mr. Forget.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Morrison.
McGill will be again represented by H. O'Hagan.

STUDENTS DONATE TO LOCAL DRIVE

Campaign Closes Today at 1 P.M.

The financial campaign for the Federated charities is drawing to a close, and in certain sections of the University much sympathy has been shown towards the movement.

The men from Science seem to be taking the thing more seriously than the students of other faculties—that is, if present indications are any proof of the state of mind in which the McGill men find themselves.

Commerce is doing very well, and Arts does not seem to be very far behind. Medicine, although the largest faculty in the University, has up to date shown very little interest in the campaign.

A good deal can be done this morning. If class presidents have not secured campaign cards—all they need do is to list the contributors on a sheet of paper and fill out the cards later.

All returns should be made at 1 o'clock to-day. Mr. Irving P. Rexford, who is in charge of the campaign in educational centres, and E. C. Amarion, who is in charge of the campaign in the University, will be at Strathcona Hall at 1 p.m. to-day to receive the returns from the various classes.

Full figures will be given in Monday's Daily. See to it that your class is not reported missing. Student subscriptions are running from 25 cents to $5. Every McGill man and woman should grasp this opportunity to help the less fortunate members of society to exist in this city.

MARITIME-WESTERN CLUBS DISCUSS DANCE

The pros and cons of the Maritime-Western dance were discussed at length yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the executives of these clubs in Strathcona Hall. The date originally set for the dance was December 8; provided that the Union ball room could be secured for that night, but this date clashes with that set for the dance at the R.V.C. that night. As there are many R.V.C. girls members of the clubs it would be preferable to hold it on another night.

The only other nights which would be suitable are December 1 and December 15, but as there are Informals on these nights the Union hall would not be available. It was suggested that the dance be held at the Venetian Gardens instead of the Union, but it was thought that a function of this sort held elsewhere than the Union would deprive it of a certain amount of college atmosphere, also it might prevent certain bashful members, who not being accustomed to the dreamy sentimental aspect of the Venetian from attending.

Nothing was definitely decided and a meeting is to be held on next Tuesday at 5:15 in the same place to make a definite decision.

THEY HAVE THEM IN THE STATES, TOO.

An account is included in an American contemporary of a "sheet" edited by a group of Law students in Los Angeles, by means of a lone typewriter, a few cub reporters, and a willingness and capacity on the part of those around to supply the news to fill its few columns. It is printed at present once a week, but gives promise of more frequent appearances in the future. Its material, judging from what can be gathered from the write-up concerning it, is largely along the lines of "Quips"; each man in this particular group with which the paper is connected

RADIO CLUB HOPE TO INSTALL SET

Will Ask for Room in Union—Programme for Year

The Radio Association has decided that McGill is to have a receiving outfit. The Students' Council is to be approached with a view to obtaining a room in the Union for the purpose of installing a powerful receiving set; so that the students may have the benefit of hearing the various concerts, lectures, and other intelligence that is broadcasted, both in Canada and the United States.

This was decided at a meeting of the Radio Association last night, in the Physics Building.

The chief impression that one received at this meeting was that it is the intention of the members of the Association to provide, during the coming season, a programme of radio concerts and lectures that will serve to awaken the interest of the students in general to the great part which radio plays in the life of to-day.

The association intends to obtain, in the near future, the component parts of a receiving outfit, and to assemble it themselves.

In addition to the concerts that have been arranged, a very interesting series of lectures is to be given, both by members of the association and by professors and others whose knowledge of the subject should attract a large audience.

The following is a list of the lectures which will be given first. It will be seen that they are of a more or less elementary nature, and will serve to initiate the new comers in radio.

- 1.—Capacity Induction and Oscillation Discharges.
- 2.—Resonance Phenomena in Coupled Oscillatory Circuits.
- 3.—Antennae and Radiation of Electric Waves.
- 4.—The Spark or Damped Wave Transmitter.
- 5.—Detection of Electric Waves, and Receivers.
- 6.—Measurements in Radio.

The main lectures, on more advanced subjects, will be as follows:

- 1.—Electric Waves—Dr. Eve.
- 2.—Thermionic Valves—Mr. R. J. Clark.
- 3.—Undamped Wave Transmitting.
- 4.—Radio Direction Finding—Dr. L. V. King.
- 5.—Radiophone Broadcasting.
- 6.—Elimination of Interference.

The lectures will be given on Wednesdays, beginning November 27th.

The meeting of the Association, which was held last night in the Physics Building, was conducted by J. A. Taylor.

The first business attended to was the election of a temporary secretary to take the place of P. Webster, who was unable to attend. Mr. Matthews was elected, and proceeded to read the minutes of the last meeting. Taylor then made several suggestions with regard to the business of the club.

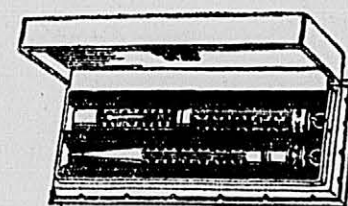

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Professor, than are dreamt of in your philosophy," said the student as he eagerly turned the pages of the Police Gazette.

and to whose interests it is devoted, volunteering to supply the editor with whatever comes to his notice regarding the doings of any in the circle. A close watch is kept upon the adjacent pool-halls and other kindred resorts, and reports telephoned to the editorial office. "This endeavour is worthy of note in consideration of the recent discussion in these volumes of 'Quips'."

"My kid brother was awfully sore at you when you were calling on me last night."

"Why so, I didn't do anything."

"That's why. He waited at the key-hole all evening for nothing."—Gargoyle.

SAVE IT

Expression of ideas in the superlative is a very prevalent practice at college as about town. By some it is doubtless employed in the hope that they are thus presenting their thoughts in a forceful manner, while, in fact they are putting them in the weakest form possible. Persistent use of the superlative reduces it to the level of the ordinary; the remarks of one known to be inclined thus to exaggeration are discounted. And if, on the other hand, he be really anxious to bring home an emphatic statement, he is at a loss to do so, having exhausted his supply of words in his interpretation of the commonplace occurrences. However, many are addicted to the use of high-sounding phrases, believing that they present the obvious road out of any difficulty that may present itself in the enunciation of our thoughts. Such use obviates the time and consideration needed to distinguish the importance of one notion from another, and sacrifices accuracy for facility of expression by placing them both on the same plane.

Extravagance in language is as reprehensible as in matters more material, and is no less a guide to character than prodigality in money, clothes or entertainment. Yet it denotes a different phase of mentality. These last-mentioned may be significant of lack of foresight, lack of restraint and a desire for self-indulgence. Indiscretion in the use of words, while indicative of the above, also betokens a perverted sense of value; it signifies inability to discriminate and as such should be guarded against by the student, the main outcome of whose education is supposed to be this very propensity for choosing good from bad, excellence from mediocrity. It is well to keep something in reserve in speech as in other things; failure to differentiate does away with this reservation.

FACULTY REPRESENTATIVES

The student body are once again reminded of the fact that all nominations for Faculty representatives on the Students' Council must be in the hands of the Secretary by Tuesday next. It is necessary, therefore, that, over the week-end at the latest, every student should take careful thought as to the qualifications of the various men whom he thinks might prove worthy of the honour of representing his faculty, and, having decided from among these that man who stands pre-eminent, let him come to college on Monday morning determined to sign his name on his candidate's nomination form, or if necessary to be the original promoter of such a nomination.

The importance of this election has been stressed many times in former years in these columns, and this year as in the past, too much cannot be said on the necessity of obtaining capable and conscientious men to represent the various faculties, if the Students' Council is to function to the best interests of the University. And the best men may easily not be selected if every student, and particularly those in the Junior years, who have a better opportunity of knowing the candidates intimately, does not pay some attention to the matter of nominating the man who, in his opinion, is best qualified.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Junior Prom. was a signal achievement. The decorations were of a quality and extent that have not graced the ball-room for many years, if ever. Every arrangement was made to cater to the comfort and enjoyment of the guests, and each item on the programme was executed with precision. This dance is an affair of which the mind of the undergraduate begins to take notice long before he has reached his Junior year. The amount of pleasure he expects to derive from attendance is increased proportionately to the time he has anticipated the event, and, although the Class of '24 may have been looking forward to last night's affair from the inception of their college course, we feel sure that they were not in any way disappointed in the Prom. which took place last evening. The members of the Junior Year, and particularly the committee which they elected to prepare for the Junior Dance, are to be congratulated upon the success which they attained.

Yesterday afternoon the Union was crowded. Every available table was occupied by the students who took advantage of the opportunity provided by the management of enjoying their afternoon tea along with popular music as afforded by the Mandolin Club. This is only another example of what may be accomplished about the university by co-operation between the various executives. The Union, and especially the cafeteria, is coming to have a place of paramount importance in undergraduate life at McGill. It is well that it is so; any influence that may serve to bring the students together, and to promote discussion amongst them, is worthy of encouragement.

The following extract is printed as being of possible interest to the student body, and a likely source of congratulation to the Freshmen at McGill, who escape the rigours of the first year at college as practiced in the universities to the South:

University of Utah, Nov. 15.—Freshmen have been provided with a large, new, painted ducking tub. This new tub appears to have been the result of a painful A.S.U.U. conscience brought about by the many years of merciless ducking of capless freshmen.

From now on, the ducking of freshmen will be made just as agreeable as possible. Around the otherwise sharp edges there is padding in case any accident should occur. Ducking apparently has firmly established itself as an institution of the school and has now lost most of its former horror.

Rowena frets in her stall,
My rifle stands in the corner,
My chaps hang limp on the wall.
Their reproachful looks still haunt me,
They plaintively seem to call,
Asking me why I have left them,
When they know that I love them all.
There were reasons for my leaving,
There are things one must consider,
For life after all is an auction room,
And each vocation a bidder,
And the one that bids the highest,
The one at whose back I run,
Called me to leave that West country,
To seek this Eastern one,
Where there is no Pablo waiting,
Where there's little but work and grind,
But the distant goal is worth it all,
So why should a fellow mind.

THROWS NEW LIGHT ON GREAT WRITER

Wordsworth Influenced by Society of Georgian Era

Professor Emile Legouis, at the University of Paris or Sorbonne, gave a most interesting lecture on "William Wordsworth in the Light of New Documents." He told of the discovery in the archives of the British Museum of many letters from Dorothy Wordsworth to the Valons family in France. Following up the clues derived from these letters, further documents were found in the museums of Paris and Rouen which shed still further light on the somewhat involved youth of the great poet.

Professor Legouis stressed the fact that Wordsworth must not be considered a Victorian. "At the coronation of Queen Victoria," he said, "Wordsworth was an old man, living on after his real work was done. He was born and lived the most productive years of his life in the Georgian Era, influenced by the rough and uncouth condition of society that he saw around him. For the sport of the times was indelicate to say the least. Old traditions and ideals were being questioned. Marriage as an institution was being assailed, and Wordsworth, impressionable as he was, could hardly fail to be influenced by it all.

"At an early age he went to France, a young poet, eager, hot-blooded, uncontrolled. There he met Annette Valons, a French girl five years his senior with whom he fell desperately in love, and with whom he assumed the relations of man and wife. He soon returned to England to try to gain his guardian's consent to a legal marriage. Before he could return to her war broke out and he found himself unable to get into France, although he had every reason to believe that he tried to do so.

"Soon afterwards the war ended, and Wordsworth, having just put the whole situation before Mary Hutchinson, an Englishwoman whom he had decided to marry, went to France and there saw Annette Valon and his daughter Caroline. After a month he returned to England, still a firm friend of his former sweetheart, and married Mary Hutchinson."—Harvard Crimson.

Nothing can surpass the delicacy of this Hindu reply.

"Well, what kind of sport has our distinguished guest had?" he asked the man who attended the foreign visitor. "Oh," replied the scrupulously polite Hindu, "the young sahib shot divinely but Providence was very merciful to the birds."—Gee Bee Record.

YARDS that measure only 35 inches and 15-ounce pounds are out-of-date. Advertising has put them out of business.

Manufacturers who advertise must give value, because they have a good name to protect. Manufacturers of well-known products and the merchants who sell these products often value the names at millions of dollars. They cannot afford to jeopardize the worth of these names by selling any but good goods of full measure and fair price.

A merchant or manufacturer cannot afford to advertise merchandise that will not give service. The penalty of such tactics is too heavy.

You can bank on this. Advertised goods must be as advertised. That is why it pays to deal with advertisers and to buy advertised products. The advertising is your protection.

MEDS. SCORE DOUBLE WIN LAST NIGHT

Two Basketball Games Won
by Medicine Teams

CLOSE SCORES

Med. '24 and Med. '25 Win
Over Med. '27 and Sci. '25

Last night, at Molson Hall, Med. '24 and Med. '25 were triumphant in two closely fought basketball games.

Med. '24 and Med. '27 staged the first contest of the evening. Med. '24's older, heavier team had the game well in hand from the beginning, and the result was never in doubt. The losers at no time showed the same efficiency in combination or perfection of shooting, and were hopelessly handicapped by their lack of weight. Their defence, Townsman and Riorden, would have shown to more advantage if opposed by men of smaller build. As it was they deserve great credit for holding Med. '24 down to 15 points.

McIntosh was high scorer for the winners, and proved himself to be the most dangerous man on the floor.

At half time the score read 10-2 in favor of Med. '24, and reveals the playing ability of the respective teams.

The second period found Med. '27 playing a slightly tighter game, and finding their opponents basket off-center. But Med. '24 was never seriously in danger of having their success reversed upon them.

Line-up:—

Med. '24.	Guards.	Med. '27.
Quackenbush		Townsman
Eager		Riorden
Rankin		Centre.
McIntosh		Forwards.
Roberts		Robertson
Caldwell		Rapline
Boston		Quackenbush
		Spares.
		Dunne
		Richardson
		Adams

Referee—James.
Final score—15-9.

The second game, Science '26 vs. Med. '25, proved a far more interesting one from the standpoint of the spectators. Although the Meds. came out on the long end of the score, 24-17, the result was never certain and interest ran to fever height.

The losers had a strong defence, Hodina particularly starring. Manley and Heeney gave the Meds. much trouble. Manley's shooting was one of the prettiest exhibits of the game, finding the basket from all angles.

Dempsey was high scorer for the victors, with Kennedy a close second. Both men worked a combination which their opponents found well-nigh invulnerable.

At half time the score stood favorably for the Meds. 13-11.

The most thrilling moments of the evening were crowded into the final period. Science '26 brought the score to 17-17, and neither team seemed able to break the tie. Hodina was painfully injured, but after a few minutes' delay he was able to continue.

Dempsey, in the dying moments of the game, made a hero of himself, and securely put the Meds. on the top with two neat, consecutive baskets. Altner confirmed the good work with another, preceded by a brilliant dribble the length of the floor.

The line-up:—

Science '26.	Guards.	Med. '25.
Hodina		Finley
Callaghan		Altner
Heeney		Centre.
Jones		Wright
Manley		Forwards.
		Kennedy
		Dempsey
		Spares.
		Dobson
		Henry
		Grimes
		Halperin

Referee: Legg.
Final score—24-17.

CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT TORONTO

Catholic, Jewish and other religions, and of different races, are being urged to attend and to express fearlessly the convictions of the groups to which they belong.

A large Committee is now at work preparing for a McGill delegation of sixty or seventy, which is to represent the strongest thought and opinion, as well as the various races and creeds, of the University. It is estimated that the total cost per delegate will be about $35.00. This Committee estimates that an average of about two-thirds of this should be provided from the central fund. Classes and various college groups are being requested to assist each to the extent of financing one or more representatives from among themselves. Churches are also assisting as well as the Board of the Theological Colleges. The final choice of delegates and the distribution of the fund will rest in the hands of a selection committee composed of University people well qualified for such a task.

FISTS, FALLS & FOILS

The first of a series of faculty boxing eliminations start this afternoon at Molson's Hall, at 8 o'clock.

There are fourteen bouts scheduled for this afternoon's eliminations, and some of McGill's best will swap punches, for the general amusement of the customers.

To-day's arguments are confined solely to the leather-pushers from Science and Medicine. There are seven bouts scheduled in each faculty.

The sluggers will face each other for three rounds of two minutes' duration each, with a brief breathing spell between the acts.

Fistic fans are promised a rare treat this afternoon. The boxing club boasts of some clever battlers, and many of these will be in action.

The winners of to-day's bouts will be in line to represent their respective faculties, in the inter-faculty tournaments to be held later.

For obvious reasons, there is no athletic commission to supervise to-day's boxing, as in professional circles. When McGill mitt slingers engage in combat, there is plenty of action for all concerned!

To-day's bouts in the Faculty of Medicine are as follows:—

118 lbs.—McKenna vs. Kelnor.
125 lbs.—R. H. Wiggins vs. F. J. Marsh.
125 lbs.—Fullerton vs. Snow.
135 lbs.—Ward vs. Reid.
135 lbs.—Millegan vs. Caron.
145 lbs.—Craig vs. Rankin.
158 lbs.—McKinnon vs. Grier.

The entries from Science are as follows:—

125 lbs.—Renfret vs. Lister.
135 lbs.—Gray vs. Hunter.
135 lbs.—Merritt vs. Blundell.
158 lbs.—Marshall vs. Cook.
145 lbs.—Dixon vs. Plant.
145 lbs.—O'Brien vs. Champion.
145 lbs.—Dufresne vs. Heroitsoos.

The next elimination contests will be held next Friday.

OTHER CAMPUSES

McGill sophomores may breathe a fervent sigh of relief that they do not attend Vanderbilt University, Tennessee. After a great deal of discussion, it has been decided that the sophomores at that University shall wear derbies with gold and black hat bands for the duration of their sophomore year.

Members of the Condon Mining Club of the University of Oregon, recently provided a novel method of introducing their club to the student body when just before lectures in the morning they supplied all students going to their lecture rooms with warm flapjacks. The members of the club were dressed as typical Forty-niners, and busily cooked flapjacks over the camp-fire for the campus populace. A neighbouring milling company supplied enough flour to make several thousand flapjacks.

The male students of the University of California held a great "Pajamarino" rally last week in the University Amphitheatre. The freshmen hauled wood for a huge fire and then all the male students clothed in pyjamas, joined in class stunts, speeches and music. One can imagine the shocked looks on elderly faces and the innumerable complaints that would arise should the students at any University in this section of the continent hold a rally of this nature.

THE LUMBERJACK AND MODERN LUMBERING

"The lumberjack of today is not the husky and sturdy type of fellow that he was 10 years ago," asserted C. J. Hogue, a Seattle lumber man, who spoke in the auditorium of the agricultural chemistry building.

"Modern methods of handling timber and the environment of the lumber camp at the present time with its many up-to-date improvements have brought about this change," Mr. Hogue said.

The lecture was illustrated with colored slides dealing with various scenes from picturesque sunsets on Puget Sound to thickly wooded timber tracts in virgin forests. The last part of the lecture was concerned with the sawing, finishing, and piling of the timber in the huge lumber mills located on the rivers emptying into the ocean.

The problem of the sawer at the mill was explained in detail by the use of sketches drawn on the cross section of various types of timber. Every log is cut in such a way as to give the largest amount of lumber and also the particular type of boards and trusses desired.

Of the 2,220 billion feet of lumber in the United States over 30 per cent. of it is in the forests bordering the western coast line. The spruce, cedar, and Norwegian pine are still the most prominent woods in the lumber industry; but the western hemlock, which sometimes reaches a diameter of seven feet, is steadily increasing in price in the eastern markets and to-day commands a price on par with other varieties.

Mr. Hogue is a representative of the logging interests of the west in New York City, and at present he is making an extended tour of the country with the aim of educating the lumber dealers in regard to problems which are arising in that particular field. The lecture was sponsored by the Forest Products club of the Forest Products laboratory. —The Daily Cardinal.

DIVERSE STUDIES IN COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The modern women's college offers many diverse courses of study if it is in line with the advance of women into social and industrial affairs. Dean Helen M. Smith, of the College for Women, states that the present attitude towards education held by the modern girl is a very different one from the one of a few years ago. In former times all college girls were expected to become teachers and the curriculum was limited to studies which properly prepare them for that occupation. The present situation is a very different one. College girls are prepared to become judges, advertising managers, private secretaries, editors, social workers, librarians, dieticians, physical education teachers, and many other types of executive or professional workers, according to Dean Smith's records.

The College for Women with its combined courses in the schools surrounding University Circle trains for any of the above occupations and many more. Besides a four year course in liberal arts, a course in household administration which prepares one to teach science, manage a lunch room, or serve as a dietician, is offered to students. Nurses are trained in connection with the local hospitals in a five year course. Co-operation with the Cleveland School of Art and the professional schools of the University permit the students to elect work in these schools to prepare for a profession. The College for Women also co-operates with the Cleveland School of Education in preparing girls for educators and teachers. Dean Smith declares that the College for Women is prepared to meet the demands of any of its students in the way of specialization of education. —The Reserve Weekly.

The Editor,
McGill Daily:

Sir,—The Princetonian interview with Thomas Edison, reprinted in Wednesday's Daily would not in the ordinary course excite any more interest than the average joke column used as a filler, but when our paper takes it seriously in an editorial, it becomes another matter.

A little knowledge is a dangerous thing; on the other hand, a modicum of ability to exploit other men's researches and inventions is a very valuable thing. Edison has proved to the hilt both dictums. To use his own arrogant language, "I defy any man to prove" that Edison has invented any scientific thing of consequence. He no more invented the gramophone than Bell invented the telephone or Marconi invented wireless telegraphy. He has merely used other men's brains commercially and made a fat living out of it. He is entitled to praise for doing so, perhaps; He is not, emphatically, entitled to be called a genius or a scientific wizard. The last little reminds me of the phenomenon at the Country Fair. He "wizzes" at stated intervals for a fee, and the papers duly advertise it. But I am sorry that the Daily should join the yelling ranks of the ill-informed.

Take that interview and see what he says. Edison's friends really ought to advise him on the value of a little reticence. He finds that college men are unable to answer his questionnaire and concludes that therefore they are uncultured. But education does not consist of being able to say offhand how many semi-colons there are in the tenth chapter of Exodus, or what the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina on a memorable occasion. His questionnaire was very nearly as silly as that. It was in fact the offspring of an uncultured mind which imagines that knowledge of a large number of unrelated facts proves possession of a first-class education.

To come to his "facts." Isn't it time the senile joke about the college man being afraid to soil his hands with manual labor were given decent burial? Edison knows, and you know and all of us know that a goodly proportion of science men spend their summer vacation in the shops of industrial establishments up and down the United States and Canada. If this sneer is a sample of his scientific love of exact statements, he would make a better yellow journalist than an inventor.

He objects that college graduates have no initiative and provide no new (i.e., money-making) schemes for him in his employ. What a crying shame that this man who has thrived on better men's work for the major part of his 'scientific' career, should now be finding it difficult to get the pick of the brains of the country to work in his interests!

But where he really does his famous stunt of "wizzing" is where it is claim

APPEAL FOR BOOKS FOR SETTLEMENT

Fairy Stories Especially Read
Eagerly by Children

The following letter has been received from Miss Maud Going concerning the University Settlement:

To the Editor of McGill Daily:
The University Settlement can justly plead a special claim upon the sympathy and help of McGill students. And it appeals now through the co-operation of the McGill Daily to the generosity of its readers.

One of the most beneficial activities of the Settlement is its library. Five hundred children and young people use it. Two hundred little readers come in sometimes in a single afternoon to exchange the books which make most of the brightness in some very gray young lives.

The children are avid for fairy stories especially. Books containing them are never numerous enough to satisfy the eager demand, and never get a rest on the shelves. In consequence of their active lives the books wear out very soon; they get quite literally "loved to pieces". Volunteer workers give the surgical aid which each case requires, but their best efforts can only postpone for a little while the inevitable end when another book breaks and another dead friend departs forever in the Salvation Army's cart.

Seeing the raggedness and general misery of many among the library books, we fervently wish there were new ones to take their places, but alas! the library treasury is for the time being empty. So we are asking the help of our friends. In many households there must be story-books which the boys and girls in their teens no longer care to read. We beg the reversion of these. If they are the worse for use we can rejuvenate them. A broken back is well nigh as fatal to a book as to a human being, but patience and a paste pot can mend minor ills. Can anyone spare us some books for children? If so, please leave them in the Chemistry and Mining building with Mr. Joseph Grimsdale, who has kindly consented to take charge of them.

"Bah! Golf is an old man's game!"
"I can't afford dit either."
—Nashville Tennessean.

that, a man in his first six weeks of work shows what he will likely be doing at 60; that a man of 21 is "set" for the rest of his life; and that anyone commands the salary he is worth.

Let us rewrite this trinity of conditions of a "man of genius" in other terms. Thus, a baby with a rattle will be amusing himself similarly at the age of 60; a Beethoven, a Soddy, an Einstein had already done their best work at 21; finally, that the author of Paradise Lost could have commanded thousands of dollars for his work instead of the five pounds he actually got for it.

Surely, Mr. Editor, of the two phenomena, Edison certainly outwizzes the artist at the Country Fair.

Yours,
C. T. LANE,
Science '25.

RESEARCH IN WHITE BREAD FOOD VALUE

American Colleges Have Done Extensive Studies

WHITE RATS USED

Whole Wheat Bread Urged
as Beneficial in Diet

The following article which appeared in the New York "Globe" recently will be of interest to all McGill students and particularly to Medical students who will follow the study of dietetics:

(From the New York Globe.)

It has been announced recently that Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Columbia and the Mellon Institute have demonstrated at last not only that white bread is a food that stunts growth and destroys life, but that an extract made from the germ and bran of whole wheat is sufficient, with the addition of certain mineral salts such as calcium and iodine, to cure these evils if taken every time one eats white bread.

As early as May, 1922, secret reports began to come out of the great American universities, accompanied by charts and photographs of animals fed on white bread. With certain reservations, the writer was kept in touch with what was going on. He knew that all the advertised bread on sale in Greater New York was included in the feeding experiments.

He knew that every loaf of white bread, including the best known brands and the most popular makes, was beginning to show the professors of nutrition who were conducting the experiments and plotting the charts that white bread does indeed stunt the growth; that white bread does indeed interfere with all the functions of maternity; that white bread does indeed pave the way to untimely death; that what bread does indeed kill its victims in a very particular and white breadish fashion.

Pictures of the dead and dying animals began to come in from Harvard and the Mellon Institute. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was prudently and graciously silent.

A newly discovered compound makes white bread just as rich in the lacking elements as other forms of food.

The Ward Baking Company has financed the experiments that have at last got into the press, and George S. Ward knows that the white bread made by his own company, as well as the white bread made by all the other bakers of New York, kills rats in a few weeks, whereas white bread plus mineral salts extracted from wheat germ and bran, and certain proteins extracted from milk, and certain other salts, particularly calcium and iodine obtained from other sources, will keep the same rats going generation after generation, in perfect health.

Of course, there are no new truths, but there are new proofs of old truths and in this truly extraordinary research the old truths take on new vigor and a new knowledge of the old facts.

If anything could be more misleading than anything else in shunting the truth out of clearness into darkness and confusion, it is the silly phrase "vitamin syrup," which has been employed as an introduction to the public of an extraordinary mineral salt campaign, in which vitamins play a humble role and are not permitted to star at the expense of the rest of the cast.

George S. Ward himself knows this, for he has read, as the writer has read, all the reports of all the professors, and he cannot be mistaken as to the significance of what they have said. When they talk about white bread killing animals they use the words "white bread" and "kill." When they talk about curing the defects of white bread they go straight into the language of "mineral salts."

The whole wheat bread eaters will not need the "fixed up" white bread, which henceforth will be called the "Vitamin Loaf," although those who won't eat whole wheat bread for the reason that they would rather not, or for the reason that you cannot make a loaf of whole wheat bread that doesn't contain the color of whole wheat, would be ever so much the better off if they could only get their hands on the patented, white loaf doctored up with the whole wheat milk and other mineral extractives.

After all, the facts that have been proved are these. Whole wheat bread made honestly and used with milk and the cheapest fresh vegetables, including an occasional egg or an occasional piece of meat, as fancy chooses, is indeed the staff of life in that with these accompanying foods it provides all that the human body needs for growth, health, strength and resistance to disease.

White bread, on the other hand, is robbed bread, and in proportion as one eats much of it and therefore less of other foods, one approaches the danger line.

CURATOR DESCRIBES CUSTOMS OF INDIAN

Hobnobbing with University students in the winter and with native Redskins in the summer, C. J. Albrecht, curator of the museum, knows all the strange and interesting customs there are. After a winter in the atmosphere of Sun Dodge and the nightshirt parade, he seeks the strange folk stories and stranger dances of the Quillayute Indians.

Mr. Albrecht goes out to sea in the dangerous little Indian skiffs, catching sea birds and sea lions for museum exhibits. He lives with an old Indian couple where the squaw learned to make pies for his benefit.

"Indians put the strangest things on their graves," he said, describing a funeral. "They have beds, dresses, Haviland china, alarm clocks, sewing machines, tricycles, kerosene stoves—whatever their choicest possessions were. They go up single file to the hill where they bury the dead, and chant weirdly while the dead man's clothing is burned." Mr. Albrecht has also attended Indian dances, the only white man invited.

Only a few generations ago the Indians with whom Mr. Albrecht spends his summers were head hunters. He speaks with great respect of their skill, as they are able to carve a canoe freehand out of a tree, where a white man must have an accurate diagram.—(Univ. of Wash. Daily.)

ON A LIP STICK.

Oh, perfumed protective!
Oh, carmine corrective!
Oh, thwarted of love and devotion!
How now can fond passion
Content with a fashion
That's sweeping the land like an ocean?

You plump down before her
And swear you adore her,
And pour out your love to Priscilla;
But sek then to seal it,
You merely congeal it
With tallow and oil of vanilla!

Was ever a stupid
The equal of Cupid
To let such a faad grip the lassies?
He'll lose his position
As master magician
And have to start calcimine classes!

HOWLERS

The naive answers of school children and their elders given in viva voce and written examinations, are known in England as "Howlers." Sometimes they are so ingenious that there is a suspicion that they are ingenious, the product of the examiners' brain, the children of a witty professor's imagination. Yet there are enough and to spare of the genuine without invention to excite our amazement and to add to the gaiety of the school world.

A few days ago the London County Council disclosed some of the most amusing of these "howlers" actually taken from the papers of those who sat for the junior county and trade scholarships.

"Nothing exists in the Sahara save a few caucuses" wrote one aspirant, while there is indeed confusion of words in the sentence of another hopeful "If Queen Elizabeth had reigned another five years, . . . she would have had a liary."

"What was the Armada?" The question should not tax the intelligence of the normal boy of ten or eleven, yet it was described as a ship, a kind of a ship, a steamer, a passenger ship sunk by the Germans in the late war, and a South American animal.

The Armada was commanded by Drake, Nelson, Napoleon, Voltaire and Jellicoe, and it was manned by French, Spanish, Germans, and "foreigners." According to one of the sitters "it sailed up the Thames with a broom at the mast-head."

One candidate said "it was fought between the French and the Germans, and the French having won gained the mastery of the Seven Seas, which they have 'ept ever since."

The story of Drake and his game of bowls naturally catches the interest of the normal boy although often his memory is not equal to his interest. One young fellow described the game of "bowls" while another declared that "Drake was playing a game of golf when the Armada hove in sight but he putted out on the last green before giving his attention to more serious tasks."

Another boy actually wrote "Sir Walter Scott was playing football when he spied the Armada," while yet another account introduced a German submarine into the affair. Perhaps the greatest confusion was to be seen in the mind of the boy who thought that "the Armada was a sister ship of the Lusitania, and was put into the Atlantic service after the latter had struck a submarine."

The Mayflower also proved a mystery ship to many of the candidates. One ingenious fellow said that the ship got its name because "it sailed in May and carried the first load of flour to America." Another made it the "flagship of Columbus," and a third described it as "carrying at the foremast the flower of the May tree." Still another confused it with the White Ship of Henry I. It was also described as "holding the record for the Atlantic service."

One candidate asked to write an essay on the supposed adventures of a stowaway finished with "He went to America, where he made a lot of money and was soon made a peer." Another "managed to swim to a small coral island in the Atlantic, where he found what the sailors called a maroon." A third said that "the stowaway would never have been discovered if he had not made so much noise gnawing at the boards of his prison when he could find nothing else to eat."

Joan of Arc was described variously as a "pleasant girl," "a great lover of 'ress," while yet another told of her "ride through the streets on a milk-white charger without any clothes on for which she was sent to Coventry by her friends and had to appear in the Police Court." One young man spoke of St. Jean as having been "burnt to a crisp at the Steak."

Queen Elizabeth was variously described as "A bold woman who was always to be seen in the palace smoking and drinking with a lot of male admirers," or "Fond of gaiety, dancing and double dealing," as "a good Queen but not a good woman." "The fierce yellow hawk." She was confused with Queen Victoria with Mary of England, with Mary Queen of Scots, with Boadicea and "with the woman who kept the royal gardens in Germany"—a literary touch indeed.

One candidate naively said "It was hard luck on Elizabeth because although she was the Virgin Queen her reputation was tarnished."

There was distinct safety in the answer regarding Wordsworth that "if he is still alive he is composing poems all day," while one little fellow spoke of the Sahara as "the lady who comes in to help mother every Tuesday."

Describing the Himalayas, one candidate said that "they are very steep and lofty, and are about six times as high as the tallest building in London." One youngster cleverly got over the difficulty by saying that "a mountain range is not unlike a baked apple." It would be interesting to probe into the confusion of words or ideas that led to this cryptic answer.

One boy wrote "People think that because some straw hats are called Panamas they are made in the Panama Canal. They are not. Most of them are made in the East End of London." In order to impress the examiner with the correctness of his statement the youngster added—"Sir, Mr. Examiner. I know this is true, because my father makes them and not every-body knows about it."

What a delight it must have been to the boy who described the Rocky Mountains as "one of the sides of the tetrahedral deformation of the earth," or even the other who said that they "belonged to the Plaster scene period of geology." One boy dismissed it airily with the remark that "the Rocky Mountains are so called because of the large number of rocks found on their top which is covered with snow so that the mountain goats have to dig around for their fodder and often get stones instead of grass owing to the frozen nature of the ground. This makes them very sick, and they die if the shepherd is not handy."

It's always 'heads I win, tails you lose' in this skirt business; they get longer and the price goes up because of the extra material; they get shorter and the price goes up because of superior quality; and in the shows where no skirts are worn the price of admission is raised and blamed on amusement tax.
